Where can I find all the records of the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program? I want to see if there are any DACA recipients who have been denied a job based on a false or incomplete background check. A: Generally, we don't have access to those kind of records. First, you have to open a case at an NTEU. Second, then you have to request a waiver of the 5 year limit for requesting a record, which can take years. After that, you have to go back to the NTEU, which will look up your request in their database, see if your request was approved, and if so, send you the records. They also get paid by the government to perform this search. A: The only way to get some kind of a searchable list of DACA recipients would be to have an NTEU run it and then submit it to a FOIA request. However, the case number would have to be submitted with the request and the information would only be able to be searched by an analyst, not a data miner (and would need to be pre-approved by the proper person before the analyst would be allowed

Web Link Generator is a small, easy to use program designed to enable users to generate any number of web links (HTTP / FTP etc.) as strings in a text file, given the first link of a link group and parameters that govern alteration of parts of the first link (variables). Introduction: Most web link generators have many features that make them difficult to use. They are also very limited in the number of links that they can produce. With Web Link Generator you can generate links using a template file, which is just a text file. Supported Features: * Generates a link with the name that is given to it from a template file. * Produces a list of links when a template file is given as the first link in a link group. * Produces a list of links that are named alphabetically and each link is given a specific name. * Sets the text of a link to be any name and sets the name of the link to be the same as the name of the link group it is in. * Sets the text of a link to be a given name and sets the name of the link to be the name given to it. * Sets the link to be an exact match of the name given to it. * Sets the link to be an exact match of the name given to it but uses any name given to it instead of the name given to it. * Lets the user control the format of the link text by specifying variables in the format of the HTML element (e.g.,) * Lets the user control the format of the link text by specifying variables in the format of the link tag (e.g.,) * Lets the user control the format of the link text by specifying variables in the format of the HTTP method (e.g., POST, GET, PUT, DELETE, etc.) * Lets the user control the format of the link text by specifying variables in the format of the file name and extension (e.g., POST / filename.ext) * Lets the user control the format of the link text by specifying variables in the format of the full path (e.g., C:\My Documents\My Files\My Pictures\my image.jpeg) * Lets the user control the format of the link text by specifying variables in the format of the full path (e.g., C:\My Documents\My Files\My Pictures\my image.jpeg) * Lets the user control the format of the link text by specifying variables in the format of the fully qualified domain name (e.g., www.MyServer.com/images/myimage.jpeg) * Lets the user control the format of the link text by specifying variables in the format of the fully
