Evaluation of the Pediatric Saturation Pulse Oximeter as an indirect measurement of carboxyhemoglobin: a multicenter correlation study. To assess the validity of a pediatric pulse oximeter (PSP) for carboxyhemoglobin (COHb) as an indicator of the level of COHb. Indirect measurement of COHb in pediatric patients is based on differences between the oxygen saturations measured by a COHb-sensitive pulse oximeter and a conventional oximeter. Seventeen centers in the United States enrolled 252 patients aged 4 to 18 years (median, 9 years). Data from each patient were obtained simultaneously from the conventional oximeter and a PSP. The correlation between the COHb-sensitive pulse oximeter and conventional oximeter was significant (P4%, the PSP underestimated the COHb level by 1.1%. The PSP had a highly significant negative bias (-3.4%; P4% may have lower saturations than they appear to be by a conventional oximeter. This relationship must be considered when using a PSP for direct measurement of COHb levels in pediatric patients.Continuous scoops of ice cream were delivered to a hastily arranged dinner party at the Sydney residence of Kim Dotcom and his co-accused, in a scene that New Zealand police regard as a powerful and rare piece of evidence against the pair, according to a source with direct knowledge.
